

Pastoral Letter for November

Dear fellow readers

The period round the end of October and early November for me has always been the month of Remembering beginning with All Saints, All Souls, Remembrance Day and Remembrance Sunday and of course Guy Fawkes – ‘remember, remember the 5th of November....’. Not all famous for the right reasons. As an aside, I met my future wife for the first time on November 6th.

I went to a secondary school in Greenwich founded in 1677 by a man named John Roan. Each year we went to the local church where his name is inscribed on the list of benefactors to the Borough to honour our founder in the annual Founders Day Service. He gave the funds to education 15 boys in the Borough and today educates 1,115 students. There we sang the school song in memory of the great man and also read the reading from Ecclesiasticus, a book in the Jerusalem Bible, a copy of which was given to me by the Bishop at my Ordination. It reads ‘Let us praise illustrious men, our ancestors in their successive generations.’ And goes on to say ‘While others left no memory, and disappeared as though they had not existed’ It always struck me as I listened to the reading, who were these people who ‘disappeared’? Who were these people who left ‘no memory’? Over the years since I have come to realise that these are the people we meet every day, our parents, our family, our children, our friends, those in our neighbourhood in our community who by the way they live, encourage and inspire us. Their names aren’t emblazed in lights. These are people known to us personally and not in the public gaze.

When someone dies it is customary to say good things about their lives and rightly so but in doing so those people must have had an effect on many on their journey in this world. What will they say about us I often wonder, what will they say about me? Remembrance ought to encourage us to look at our own lives and how we live and interact with others. What do we learn from those ‘silent people’ we knew and loved? Remembrance isn’t simply looking back and having fond or inspired memories. It should be looking forward to take from those memories things that will improve our own lives and the lives of those around us. My school song ends with the question about the future. ‘What can we give her (England) for our Founder’s sake? The answer given in the next line – ‘Ourselves we give to England till John Roan shall wake.’

So, this year as we remember let us reflect on those we have loved, shared our lives with and who encouraged us, and say ‘thank you’ and to move on to fill our lives with the things and thoughts that motivated them and pray that we will bring to our world what they gave us. David
